Clean Plate Drive Planned By Red Cross

Courses for housemothers and young married couples are among the classes being planned by the local Red Cross ip connection with its Clean Plate program.

If the housemothers will request the class as a group, then one set of interests can be catered to, Mrs. W. D. Valleau, nutrition chairman of the Red Cross chapter, stated this week. Mis. Eleanor S. Clay, local Red Cross nutrition director, will be the teacher for a series of six classes of two hours each given under the general title of Food Fashions. Another 12 hour course in Food Cost Budgets of more interest to house mothers will also be offered. The Food Fashiens course includes Slimnastics. The Lady Who Lives Alone and Likes It. Dinner for Two, Feeding the Teens, Twice Served Foods, a course on left-overs, and How To Be Scrap-Happy. The Food Cost Budgets course will include instruction on how and where to substitute

Weaving of nylon yarn required the development of special sizing material

Problem solved by Du Pont men with many types of training

Each new product that is created in the laboratory seems to bring with it a new set of problems to challenge the ingenuity of the scientist. An outstanding instance of this is nylon. To make practicable the weaving of nylon into textiles, it was necessary to develop an entirely new slasher sizing material -a coating to make the filaments adhere to one another, protect the yarn from abrasion and keep it clean. Sizes used on other fibers proved unsatisfactory on nylon, because of its unique chemical composition.

Five candidates were exhaustively tested by Du Pont men. Best by far proved to he polymethacrylic acid (PMA), [CH2=C(CH3)COOH]x, possibly because its acidic nature is favorable to hydrogen bouding with the polyamide structure of nylon.

Many technical problems involved

(1) After weaving, sizing has to be removed by water. PMA dissolves in water readily up to 10% at room temperatures, but precipitates between 70-80° C. A way had to be found to prevent precipitation at the normal scouring temperature of 100° C.

entire worp is cooled rather than a single thread.

(2) PMA sets to a brittle, glassy material on fibers, giving a harsh wrap. Suitable plasticizers such as sulfonated vegetable and mineral oils, glycols and other polyhydric alcohols had to be found to correct this condition and permit stretching and flexing of the yarn without film impairment.

(3) Good dispersing agents were necessary so that the powdered I'MA would not agglomerate as it dissolved in the sizing bath.

G. W. Fassett, B.S. in Chemistry, Augustana '36, and W. A. Franta, M.S. In Chemical Engineering, North Dakata '34, Inspect wovea fabric made from PMA sized nylon warp in Du Pont Experimental Weaving Laboratory.

(4) Optimum concentrations of PMA and the various plasticizers had to be determined, and application temperatures worked out for the different types of fabrics (satins, twills, taffetas, etc.) to be sized. The basic reactions involved in making methacrylic acid monomer are atraightforward:

(CH_d)₂CO + HCN → (CH_d)₂C(OH)CN (CH_i)₂C(OH)CN +

But several technical difficulties in the manufacture of the polymer had to be (1) The distillation of the monomer has to be controlled carefully to keep it from polymerizing in the still head. (2) The monomer must be obtained free of any color-forming impurities that might cause permanent discoloration of the fabric by the final polymer solution. (3) Polymerization of the monomer must be carefully regulated to get reproducible results and constant molecular weight. This is important because the molecular weight of the PMA determines the viscosity of the size. (4) Drying the polymer presented unusual difficulties. A special study was made to find an economical drying process that would give a uniform, tinely divided product adapted to rapid solu-

Credit for the development of PMA textile sizing, is shared by Du l'ont men with many types of trainingchemists, physicists, chemical engineers and textile experts, as well as the technical service men who worked in close cooperation with leading textile manufacturers during commercial trials.
